LEANER & MEANER

President Obama pledges military spending cuts but emphasizes superiority

Reuters

WASHINGTON President Obama, rolling out a new defense strategy to shrink the country's armed forces at a time of tight budgets at home, pledged Thursday to maintain the U.S. as the world's dominant military power.

"Our military will be leaner but the world must know—the United States is going to maintain our military superiority with armed forces that are agile, flexible and ready for the full range of contingencies and threats," Obama said during a news briefing at the Pentagon.

Emphasizing the American presence in the Asia-Pacific region, where there is growing U.S. rivalry with an increasingly assertive China, Obama cautioned the military would remain vigilant in the Middle East.

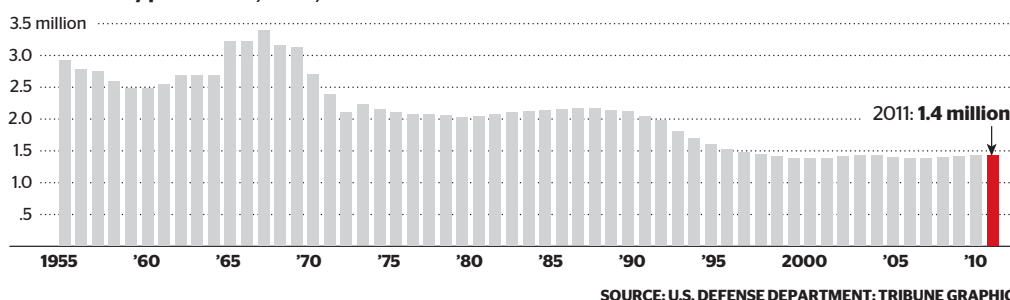

U.S. troops last month completed their withdrawal from Iraq, which was invaded in 2003 to topple dictator Saddam Hussein, and are winding down their presence in Afghanistan.

Obama, focused on boosting economic growth and curbing stubbornly high U.S. unemployment as he fights for re-election in November, said that ending those two wars was an opportunity to rebalance national spending priorities after a decade of conflict.

CUTS COMING

The Pentagon plan would cut about 100,000 troops from current levels.

Active military personnel By fiscal year

Noting the defense budget had witnessed "extraordinary" growth after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, Obama said that pace of spending would slow but continue to grow.

"I firmly believe, and I think the American people understand, that we can keep our military strong—and our nation secure—with a defense budget that continues to be larger than roughly the next 10 countries combined," he said.

Obama has already earmarked defense budget cuts of $489 billion over 10 years. The defense budget faces an additional $600 billion in cuts after Congress failed to agree to broad deficit reduction after an August debt ceiling deal.

The president's budget proposal for 2013 will be published in early February.

"Some will no doubt say the spending reductions are too big; others will say they're too small," Obama said.

"After a decade of war, and as we rebuild the sources of our strength—at home and abroad—it's time to restore that balance."

BIGGER, BADDER BOMBER

President Obama's new military strategy calls for development of a new long-range stealth bomber even as the Pentagon seeks about $490 billion in reductions in the next decade.

The bomber is part of the administration's goal to have weapons that are able to reach areas far from bases and where "our access and freedom to operate are challenged," according to Obama's updated defense strategy released Thursday.

The development of the aircraft will be the first new bomber design in almost three decades, since Northrop Grumman Corp.'s B-2.

Plans call for the new bomber to be "optionally manned," meaning it may be flown by a pilot or operated remotely, Maj. Chad Steffey, an Air Force spokesman, wrote in an email. Such a plane would be a first, Steffey said. BLOOMBERG

Wu-Tang's forever, but coolness isn't

Ernest Wilkins

» erwilkins@tribune.com
» @remixchicago

The Wu-Tang Clan is coming to the Congress Theater on Sunday and... can I be honest? I'm feeling kinda weird about it.

Don't get me wrong. I'm a stupid huge fan of the Killa Bees. They're amazing. I remember hearing their music on my cousin's tape deck and seeing their videos on The Box. (High-five if you remember The Box.) I even got emotional when ODB left this planet.

What gets me is they're billing the show as a reunion concert, which I guess makes sense. It's rare that all eight surviving members (I don't consider hanger-on Cappadonna a full Wu-Tanger) are on the same stage.

When I heard Wu-Tang was coming to Chicago, I experienced a brief moment of excitement, but that was followed by dread. The Clan are now looked at as legends in the rap scene. I remember when they got big.

Now it's time for a reunion tour? Am I that old? Is what I consider popular culture not the case anymore?

There was a time when I knew every song on the Billboard chart. Now? I'm looking at my co-workers like, "What the hell is an Avicii?"

When I'm out, people are prattling on and on about new shiny things that I don't understand. It's annoying. And yes, I know I'm only 26.

People older than I am are experiencing this on a far greater scale, but you know what? Pipe down—ain't nobody talking to you guys right now.

This column is dedicated to everyone 25 and younger who has the sheer testicular fortitude to complain about getting "older." Fun fact: The only known alternative to aging is death. Good luck with that. Also, shut the hell up. Allow me to be the Ghost of Pop Culture Past.

Back in my day, Justin Timberlake wasn't a dapper guy everyone loved. He was a guy who wore acid-washed denim suits. In public. #NeverForget

Whew! Rant over.

Now that I've gotten that blind fury out of my system, what's the next step? Trying to keep up with current trends at the expense of my health and sanity? No one wants to be the old dude at the club. (Looking your way, Diddy.) Do I abandon all hope of staying current and just cling to the stuff I liked when I was 15? (Looking at you, people who claim they only like "classic hip-hop.") Do I just say screw it and just go full-Juggalo?

It's enough to drive someone insane. Maybe that's the solution. Calm down, have a drink or three and realize that you aren't going to always be the tastemaker.

You won't be the one who knows where the super-secret speakeasy is. But the thing few people realize? That's not a bad thing.

You can be as cool as you want to be if you're ultimately the only one you're trying to impress. If the band you like isn't popular anymore, don't stress. You'll never have to worry about the show selling out! See? Things are looking up already.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I'm off to go listen to "It's Yourz" on repeat. Wu-Tang now, and Wu-Tang forever.

ERNEST WILKINS IS CHICAGO'S WINGMAN.

'GENTLE GIANT' MOURNED

Supt. McCarthy vows to catch off-duty police officer's killers

Chicago Tribune

Chicago police Officer Clifton Lewis, who was killed last week while working off-duty as a security guard at a convenience store, was eulogized Thursday as a "gentle giant" who went beyond his duty in serving as a protector of his community.

As services were being held for Lewis, sources confirmed detectives were questioning three people in connection with his slaying.

While Gov. Quinn, Mayor Emanuel and Police Supt. Garry McCarthy all praised Lewis for his service and dedication, it was McCarthy who drew the loudest applause when he promised to bring Lewis' killers to justice.

"I promise we will not tire until we find and hold responsible those responsible for this senseless act," he said.

Emanuel, speaking at the service at United Missionary Baptist Church, 4242 W. Roosevelt Road, called Lewis a man of "quiet humility, comforting authority and calm confidence" who dedicated himself to his community, his colleagues and his city. He too was applauded when he noted that Lewis had received 81 commendations during his eight years on the force.

Emanuel, who on Wednesday participated in a leafletting asking for the public's help in finding Lewis' killers, said the robbery and slaying do not embody Chicago.

"As I went door to door yesterday in Austin, I want you to know that I saw an outpouring of love and support for Officer Lewis," Emanuel said. "That is the city that we call home, and what happened the other night darkens our lives. That is not the city we know. That is not the city we love. And that is not the people we are."

Quinn said "Cliff truly was a hero" and someone who "understood you had to live in a community to protect a community."

Lewis, 41, was working a second job as a security guard at M&M Quick Foods, 1201 N. Austin Blvd., on Dec. 29 when he was fatally shot during a robbery by two suspects. He took the job after the store was robbed about three weeks earlier.

RIVER NORTH

McDonald's customer served a side of DUI

Chicago Tribune

A man was arrested after he and another man passed out in their SUV while waiting in the drive-through lanes of the Rock 'N Roll McDonald's in River North on Sunday, officials said.

But instead of getting another burger, police served Walter R. Dixon with DUI charges and doled out a side order of driving on a revoked license, police said.

In addition, Dixon, 30, was also cited for illegal transportation of alcohol and obstructing identification, after initially giving police a false name, police said. Police news affairs Officer Darryl Baety said Dixon lives in Memphis, Tenn.

About 6 a.m. Sunday, police were called to the restaurant at 600 N. Clark St. after Dixon and another man fell asleep in a black Volvo

SUV in the drive-through lane of the restaurant, according to a police report.

When officers arrived, they found the men fast asleep with the vehicle's key in the ignition, its engine running and the SUV in drive. Dixon's foot was resting heavily on the brake pedal.

Officers awakened the snoozing Dixon and ordered him to put the vehicle in park and hand over the keys.

When they asked Dixon if he needed any medical attention or an ambulance, he said no, he "just wanted another McDonald's sandwich," the report said.

The 29-year-old front-seat passenger remained asleep during the stop. The vehicle was impounded and his passenger caught a taxi back to his Blue Island home, where he lives with his parents, the report said.

LOGAN SQUARE Rally against sexual assault

Sri Lankan university students protest Thursday in Colombo. Students were asking authorities to remove vice chancellor N.L.A. Karunaratne of the Sri Jayawardenepura university.

Casey Anthony diary goes viral

4 ORLANDO, Fla. She's back—even if she doesn't want to be.

A YouTube video that went viral Thursday shows Casey Anthony speaking out about her life for the first time since she was found not guilty last summer of killing her daughter, Caylee, in Florida.

"It's just a little surreal how much things have changed since July and how many things haven't changed," Anthony, 25, said in the 4-minute recording she described as the first installment of her video diary.

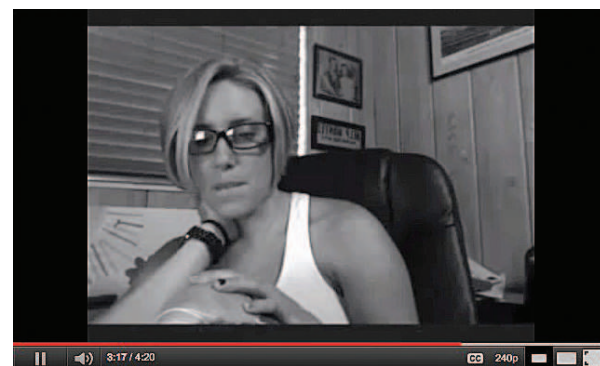

"But the good thing is that things are starting to look up and things are starting to change in a good way. I just hope they stay, things stay good and they only get better."

Anthony's lawyer confirmed to CNN that it is Anthony in the video.

"Casey has maintained notes and memoirs for her personal counseling," Cheney Mason told CNN on Thursday. "She did not upload or release this to YouTube. She doesn't know how the video got on YouTube. She did not authorize it, and therefore it had to be obtained illegally."

In the video, which Anthony said was recorded in October, she sports a short, blond hairstyle and black-framed glasses, a different look from her long, brunette hair at trial.

She is sitting in an office chair in a plain paneled room, giving no indication of her whereabouts, which have been kept secret by the court for her safety while she serves a one-year probation on check fraud charges.

Anthony never mentions her high-profile trial or her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee, who prosecutors said was dead for a month before Anthony told anyone the toddler was missing in 2008. Anthony was acquitted by a jury in Orlando of a first-degree murder charge. She is appealing her convictions on four counts of lying to detectives about what happened to Caylee.

5 Giffords to attend vigil

U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords will attend a vigil in Tucson, Ariz., on Sunday to commemorate the anniversary of the mass shooting a year ago in which she was badly wounded, her office said Wednesday. Giffords will join a candlelight vigil at the University of Arizona with her husband, retired astronaut Mark Kelly.

6 Americans get their guns

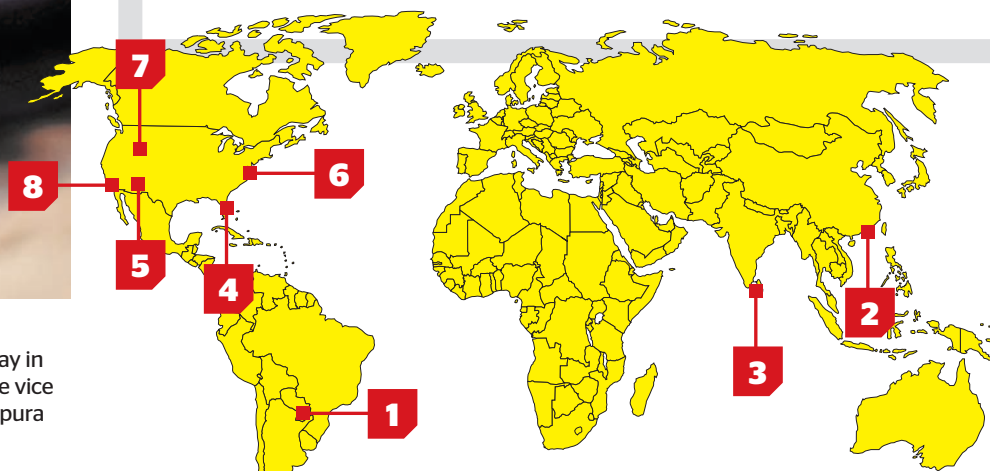

The FBI performed a record number of instant background checks on would-be firearm buyers in 2011 as Americans went on an apparent gun-buying spree, according to new government data. The FBI said it fielded nearly 16.5 million queries from firearms sellers last year, up 15 percent from 2010.

7 Six officers shot in Utah

Six police officers were shot, one of them fatally, when a gunman opened fire on them as they served a drug-related search warrant, authorities said Thursday. The suspect shot at the officers late Wednesday evening as they approached the home in a quiet residential neighborhood of Ogden, Utah, police said.

8 Prosecutors: Arsonist angry

Hollywood arson suspect Harry Burkhart terrorized L.A. residents with a four-day firebombing rampage over New Year's weekend because he was "motivated by his rage against Americans," prosecutors alleged in court papers filed Wednesday. The judge set bail at $2.85 million.

THE DEPARTED

Blackhawks-Philadelphia rematch barely resembles 2010 Stanley Cup clincher

But fans can be forgiven if there wasn't much of a sense of déjà vu. Sure, Stanley Cup finals hero Patrick Kane still is around, as are Blackhawks stalwarts Jonathan Toews, Marian Hossa, Duncan Keith and Brent Seabrook, but that's about it. The Flyers have a much different look this time around too. Where'd some of the key players from that championship series go? We've found them.

RedEye

The Blackhawks were back in Philadelphia on Thursday night, returning to the Wells Fargo Center ice for the first time since you-know-what happened two years ago.

Daniel Carcillo

THEN: Making trouble as a Flyer.

NOW: Making trouble as a Blackhawk. He's injured now. Oh, and suspended too.

Dustin Byfuglien

THEN: Big Buff was a playoff hero for the Blackhawks, particularly when he has camping out in front of the opposing goalie.

NOW: He's traded in his Indian head sweater for a Winnipeg Jets jersey.

Michael Leighton

THEN: The Philadelphia Flyers goalie who let in Kane's legendary shot.

NOW: Playing for the Adirondack Phantoms in the AHL.

Andrew Ladd

THEN: The man with the mammoth playoff beard did the dirty, under-the-radar work for the Blackhawks.

NOW: He does the same for Winnipeg. Very under-the-radar nowadays.

Chris Pronger

THEN: The famous puck stealer and gargantuan Philly defenseman.

NOW: Oh, he's still playing in Philly, but he had knee surgery Nov. 29 and hasn't been on the ice since.

Gotta love the Bears.

You don't realize how bad, how messed up, how backward, how impotent and dysfunctional they really are until ... they try to fix things.

First off, Ted Phillips, you're next. You've contributed nothing to this fiasco except hiring the loser from Tampa Bay 10 years ago who specialized in losing. And he didn't pick his first head coach—and that was a mess. So, let's do that again.

Secondly, good luck pitching this job to the next G.M. Here's how that meeting goes: "So, um, you can't pick your coach, you need to draft every position and start preparing three weeks ago, you need a new offensive coordinator, and the family that owns the team is a bunch of zombies. Also, the coach has to like you enough to let you fire him a year from now."

Sign. Me. Up.

Actually, here's how I'd pitch it: "Come to Chicago! We have the franchise quarterback, now all we need is the franchise!"

It's worth noting as they will botch this again: This is a second-rate franchise run by inept people. How did this crap end up, in all places, in the birthplace of NFL football? There's a question I'd pose to the football gods when I leave this world (Oh, take me to that next place!).

Update: The team that went 0-16 a few years ago has passed you in talent.

I guess the fact that we're not using a search firm is cause for rejoicing. We know enough about the NFL to mess this one up on our own.

So, crystal ball time. Lovie goes in a year, and that's a new head coach and a new coordinator, Cutler's fourth in five years. Let's waste that career some more.

Football hell. We're in it, people. And there's no way out. So, say your thanks for the Bulls and Blackhawks. They work better than aspirin at this point.

And some comic relief always helps. Carlos Zambrano heads to Miami and joins Ozzie Guillen. Oh yeah, that's going to work. Until the first blow-up.

Two words: hurricane season.

1 What was your favorite moment of the Carlos Zambrano era?

The time he earned $18 million while pitching middle relief. Bless you, Jim Hendry.

Sorry, it's not suitable for words.

Big Z vs. a Gatorade cooler. Try that in Florida, where they don't have as many Gatorade coolers as they have gators.

Punching Michael Barrett was pretty funny, honestly.

Easy. Getting lit up and fighting/blaming Michael Barrett. A classic.

2 How could Theo Epstein convince a team to take Alfonso Soriano?

Offer to pay his health insurance and cover $1 billion of the $1.3 billion he's owed.

He was the only one left.

That question came out of left field—if only Soriano would do the same.

Get that other GM really, really, really drunk.

You say "we'll take nothing in return and pay 90 percent of his salary." NBA-style!

3 How can the Bulls stop Dwight Howard, who just had 28 points and 20 rebounds?

Two words: John Scott.

Krypton-bite him.

Mention Adidas possibly giving D-Rose $250M. Now if you'll excuse me, I have adoption papers to draw up ...

Counter Dwight power with Dwight power: start Schrute at center.

You don't. The smarter move is to pull him aside and say "You need to play here."

4 How do you feel when you see Derrick Rose hit the floor after a hard foul?

Makes me want to puke, but mainly because it means I'm watching the NBA.

The broom's off the Rose.

Better question is how does Adidas feel? "You hear that, Elizabeth? I'm coming to join you, honey!"

The same way I feel when someone drops a full New Glarus bottle. NOOOOOOO!

The exact same way I felt watching Cutler hurt his thumb. It would all be over.

5 Injuries are piling up for the Blackhawks. Do they have a problem?

Not as long as Toews, Hossa, Sharp and Kane stay healthy.

Best team to come from Rockford since the Peaches. It's a real league, professional.

Can't Coach Q just stare the pain away?

Until they fall out of first place, no complaining allowed.

Yeah, and that problem is Daniel Carcillo.

TWICE THE DATA. SAME LOW PRICE.

SHAMELESS MIDSEASON

NO MATTER WHAT YOU'RE WATCHING, WINTER TV HAS SOMETHING FOR YOU

Two drunk, loud and sometimes obnoxious groups are vying for viewers on the midseason TV schedule: The guidos of "Jersey Shore" and the Gallaghers of "Shameless." If you had to watch only one, which would it be? Oh, I have that answer.

Nothing says winter like a cold wind chilling you to the bone, which is exactly what I felt as I typed "Jersey Shore."

They're ba-ack! And despite being tanned within an inch of their lives, The Situation, Snooki, JWoww, Pauly D, Deena, Ronnie, Sammi and Vinny do nothing to warm me up as I contemplate their fifth season, in which they return to Seaside Heights after terrorizing Italy in Season 4. As evidenced in the season premiere, which aired Thursday, nothing has changed. The gang gets ripped during a party at Captain Hook's that leads to the most ridiculous smackdown between The Situation's pal, Jonny "The Unit" Manfre, and Snooki.

"Like who are you?" Snooki asks. And the snark flies. No fists do—which is sad, because in my reality-TV-hating opinion, the whole stretch-our-15-minutes-please lot of them should be stricken from the air.

If you want bold activities and high drama motivated by something other than fame, tune in Sunday for Season 2 of Showtime's "Shameless." The scripted series follows the misadventures of the Gallagher family, whose father (William H. Macy) can't stay sober long enough to care for his clan of six kids ranging in age from adult to toddler. With exteriors filmed all over Chicago last summer and fall, this series offers a look at Chicago's South Side in warm weather—and the action heats up plenty. Three episodes in, and I am in love with the Gallaghers again.

The Gallagher family and friends brawl, drink too much and do shocking things, but you actually feel something other than embarrassment when you watch them. Unlike the guidos, the Gallaghers have heart, soul and, most importantly, something to say.

REALITY-NEW

Reality shows are like rabbits; they just keep spawning more of the same. Here are five new shows this winter.

American Stuffers

9 p.m. Thursdays, Animal Planet
Do you miss Fido? You can get him stuffed in Romance, Ark.

Caged

9 p.m. Monday, MTV
Louisiana hillbillies try to make it in the world of mixed martial arts.

Bering Sea Gold

9 p.m. Jan. 27, Discovery
There's gold in them there, um, seas. Alaska's Bering Sea, actually.

Comic Book Men

9 p.m. Feb. 12, AMC
What happens in Kevin Smith's comic-book store won't stay there.

SCRIPTED—NEW

Here are 15 new scripted series that could become appointment TV this winter season.

Smash 9 p.m. Feb. 6, NBC
Katharine McPhee, Debra Messing and others put on a Broadway show, and it is smashing.

Rob!

7:30 p.m. Thursday, CBS
Rob Schneider stars in a sitcom that thinks speaking Spanish badly is muy chistoso. It's not.

The Finder

8 p.m. Thursday, Fox
Iraq War vet Walter Sherman (Geoff Stults) has a knack for finding anything—including a lot of trouble.

Napoleon Dynamite

7:30 p.m. Jan. 15, Fox
The indie movie sensation becomes an animated series; I don't get what all the fuss is about.

Luck

8 p.m. Jan. 29, HBO
Dustin Hoffman and Nick Nolte deliver strong performances in this gritty examination of the world of horse racing.

The Fades

8 p.m. Jan. 14, BBC America
A high school nerd discovers he's an "angelic," which means he gets to fight ghosts and bullies at his school.

House of Lies 9 p.m. Sunday, Showtime
Fast-talking management consultants eat, drink, sleep and sex their jobs. It's quite tiring.

Alcatraz 7 p.m. Jan. 16, Fox
Inmates who vanished into thin air while serving time on Alcatraz start to reappear. And they have a mission.

The River

8 p.m. Feb. 7, ABC
Something supernatural in the Amazon jungle got explorer Emmet Cole, and now it's after his rescue party.

Touch

8 p.m. March 19, Fox
(Fox will air a preview at 8 p.m. Jan. 25)
An autistic child sees bad things in the future, forcing Daddy (Kiefer Sutherland) to try to stop the madness before it happens.

GCB

9 p.m. March 4, ABC
After losing everything, a former mean girl returns to her hometown. Yes, her frenemies remember.

Lost Girl

9 p.m. Jan. 16, Syfy
The faes are a not-so-merry band of beings living secretly among humans. Bo, a succubus who feeds off sexual energy, has no desire to join either side in their war.

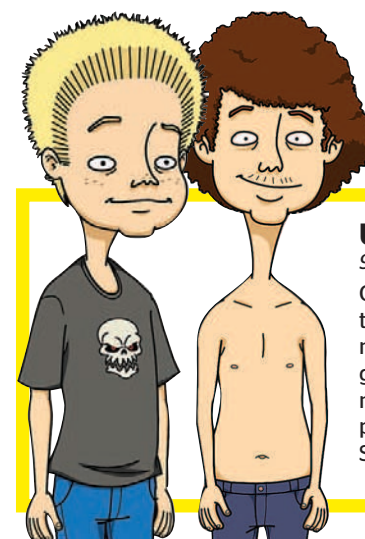

Are You There, Chelsea?

7:30 p.m. Wednesday, NBC
NBC has completely retooled this comedy based on Chelsea Handler's book. Could mean it's better.

The Firm

8 p.m. Sunday, NBC
Josh Lucas stars as lawyer Mitch McDeere in a sequel of sorts to John Grisham's book. Yes, Josh Lucas. I'm there.

Unsupervised

9:30 p.m. Jan. 19, FX
Gary and Joel navigate their teen years with no role models or adult guidance in this animated comedy from the producers of "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia."

New 'Shameless' eps get rocky for fan fave

When "Shameless" star Jeremy Allen White describes the Season 1 scene in which his character pees on his father, you have to wonder if the actor is sensitive—or demented.

"It's kind of beautiful when the father steps out of the stream of urine and realizes, 'this is right,' and he steps back into it," the 20-year-old White, who plays Lip Gallagher in the series, said. "It's kind of romantic and beautiful in a way. I think he's taking it because he knows he did something terrible."

That terrible thing: Lip's deadbeat dad, Frank (William H. Macy), had sex with Lip's girlfriend, Karen (Laura Wiggins), who just happens to be the daughter of Frank's live-in girlfriend, Sheila (Joan Cusack).

Bundled against a cold November wind, White chatted between takes at 1937 S. Spaulding Ave., which serves as Sheila's home. In Season 2, which debuts at 8 p.m. Sunday on Showtime, he said fan favorite Lip faces more trouble in his relationships with Karen, Frank and his brother, Ian.

LIP AND FRANK

"Obviously he's used to being disappointed by his father. This is an extreme, for sure, but I find Lip's relationship with his father in the second season, as a result of not only him sleeping with Karen but his behavior throughout Lip's entire life, he almost ignores his father. It's become something that Lip just kind of has to deal with and they don't even talk very much this season."

LIP AND IAN

"Lip and Ian's relationship is strained an awful lot. We go a little deeper into that. We really start to explore how Ian really does want to join the Army and specifically go to West Point. Lip is against that but because of brotherly love he decides he'll help Ian out. He definitely feels some aggression from Ian because he's really trying to get into West Point and his physical stuff is great but academically he just doesn't have it. It's just something he cannot do, but it comes to Lip so easily. So they really start butting heads. ... Ian's so frustrated because he can't do it. Lip could, but doesn't give a [bleep]."

LIP AND KAREN

"What really hurts is what Karen did to him. It's probably the first time Lip's ever been in love and it's his first relationship ever and maybe even the first time he's had sex. And so I think that trust being broken by her is far more damaging in a way than what happened with his father. But they do still see each other in Season 2; yeah, they get together. [Laughs.]"

Playing a teenager puts Adepero Oduye, 33, on fast track to awards

By Matt Pals | REDEYE

Michelle Williams. Elizabeth Olsen. Adepero Oduye?

Yep, the star of "Pariah," who doesn't even have a Wikipedia page, has joined those big names as a nominee for best female lead actress at the 2012 Independent Spirit Awards. Oduye, whose biggest movie role to date has been the "Crack Smoker" in "Half Nelson," can't believe it.

"It hasn't really sunk in that I'm actually a nominee, as opposed to listening and watching for other people," the New York native said. "I'm telling people I'm just taking it one hour at a time. I try not to get too far ahead of myself because then it's just like, 'What's happening?'"

Something many people can't believe is that in "Pariah," opening Friday, the 33-year-old Oduye plays 17-year-old Alike, a lesbian who has come out to her friends but not to her parents (played by Kim Wayans and Charles Parnell). In mid-December at the Four Seasons Hotel, Oduye talked about the Sundance hit, saying "You don't have to be a young, black lesbian from New York City to get something from it."

She's right.

How do people react when they find out your age compared with Alike's age?

Either applause or people are people are like, "Whoa!" Some people think I'm just straight lying. People just think, "No, you can't be." And I tell them, "I'm pretty sure that's my age," and I take it as a big, huge compliment because it means people really believe [the film], and that's all I really wanted.

Have there been other times when people comment that you look younger than you are?

Oh, yeah, yeah, I get that all the time. All the time. People are like, "How old are you? 23?" I'm like, "Oh, no." It's always like 23, 24, 25, and it's always flattering but I'm always just like, "No, no, no, nowhere near that age." [Laughs.] It's funny, at Sundance, people were like, "Oh, so are you still in school?" I can tell they're still thinking I'm maybe in college perhaps. And I'm like, "No, I'm done with school."

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

Oduye in 'Pariah'

4 TAKES WITH ADEPERO ODUYE

On "Half Nelson" co-star Ryan Gosling: "He was just a really cool, down-to-earth guy. He was just doing all these heavy things, he was just really cool. I was only on set for one day. He was just a really nice guy. A really nice, generous guy."

A movie she's not ashamed to love: "The Notebook" and "Speed."

An album you still love after hearing it a long time ago: "Anything by Michael Jackson. So Michael Jackson 'Thriller.' I love love love it."

Something new on her iPod: "Frank Ocean. That's on repeat right now."

"What do you want to be when you grow up, little girl?"

[Laughs.] "So, do you think [you'll do this for a career?]" And I'm like, "Yeah, I've been doing this for some time."

"What do you think of the new Miley Cyrus album?"

[Laughs.] I'm like, "Who's that?" But it's flattering.

You had an assignment to go into a black and Latino lesbian club in character. How would you describe that experience?

It was interesting. I was in a club full of women but I felt like I was in the club with men and women. The women were either really butch or really femme. I had to keep telling myself, "I'm in a club full of women; there's no men here." But it's like people check the box. It was very clear, the gender roles were very, very clear, and very extreme. ...

I was in the middle and people were just circling around me and I felt very awkward and uncomfortable. I didn't know how to stand, I didn't know how to dance, 'cause I'm dressed a certain way but my body wants to dance another way. It was overwhelming and I just had to stay frozen.

Did you and writer-director Dee Rees establish a limit to staying in character? Where would you have drawn the line?

[She was] there, kind of watching, making sure everything's OK, but they didn't interact with us at all. They just basically threw us in there and it was kinda like, "Whatever happens, happens. Whatever you're comfortable with happening, just go with it." I definitely felt super uncomfortable, and I think Parnell she tried to get me to stick a dollar, there was like a go-go dancer in the bar, like stick it in her G-string, and I was like, "No, no no!" I was like, "Ahh!" It was a lot.

Alike has an incident involving fake male genitalia that's white. How much will this movie increase the amount of time people think about the race of their sex toys?

[Laughs.] I don't know! That's a whole 'nother world I was just introduced to. ... The day that we shot that scene, I thought, "I should be more uncomfortable. I should feel more weird about this, but I don't." It was a nice time to be light on the set. I like brushed up against the DP with the dildo on and making people laugh and uncomfortable.

Why did you feel like you should feel uncomfortable?

I don't know. I guess it's kind of weird. I was like, "I should feel weird. I've never seen a dildo before or held one before."

That's what they all say.

[Laughs.] It was more funny, more fascinating. Like, "Oh wow, OK."

In the Land of Blood and Honey (R)

While most of the world pays more attention than necessary to Angelina Jolie's personal life, her interest in hot-button celeb gossip terms such as "breakup" only applies to this film if we're talking about the breakup of Yugoslavia.

In her narrative feature writing-directing debut (Jolie also helmed the 2007 doc "A Place in Time"), Jolie does prove herself a capable filmmaker. Nothing about "In the Land of Blood and Honey" screams, "This is a first try for the star of 'Salt.'"

Of course, the question I have to ask about this story in which a Serbian soldier (Goran Kostic) protects a Muslim woman (Cobie Smulders doppelganger Zana Marjanovic) during the early 1990s war in Bosnia-Herzegovina is, "What do we learn?" Jolie uses the same star-crossed love story that's been told for centuries to depict a brutal but superficial concept of both the political situation and interpersonal relationships.

People will come out of "In the Land of Blood and Honey" emotionally exhausted from Jolie's depictions of bombings, murders and rapes, but they won't feel like they know more about how and why all that happened. A movie about a specific event shouldn't feel so general.

Pariah (R)

After seeing "Pariah," you should not be surprised to hear that it garnered positive attention at the Sundance Film Festival. But the New York-set indie drama rides distinctive wheels on a familiar track so that naturalistic performances only go so far, and conventional plotting can't inhibit reality from making its mark.

Newcomer Adepero Oduye stars as Alike (that's pronounced A-lee-kay, but she goes by "Lee"), a smart high school junior who's come out to herself and her best friend (Pernel Walker) but not to her parents (Kim Wayans and Charles Parnell). Of course Lee's new friendship with Bina (Aasha Davis) takes her to new places and then even more difficult emotional territory, and of course Lee's more accepted by her late-working, maybe-cheating detective dad than by her God-fearing mom.

Yet despite writer-director Dee Rees' devotion to the expected, "Pariah" presents a difficult coming-of-age story without pushing its struggles toward phony melodrama. The now-33-year-old Oduye is great as a 17-year-old struggling with her identity and trying to be ready for what she knows she wants.

There's also inherent value in simply paying attention to a character like Alike. It goes without saying that I can count on one hand the number of films you can see in a theater in which a young girl laments that the strap-on penis she has is white, not black.

10 TO KNOW IN 2012 FILMS

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Don't worry, movie fans, 2012 will deliver plenty of films with people like Jason Segel, Reese Witherspoon, Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Christian Bale. But these 10 actors and actresses—whom you might not know as well—also could have a big 2012 on screen.

» Find more faces to know at redeyechicago.com.

Henry Cavill

No human could make much of a dent in the visually majestic nonsense of "Immortals." But you have another chance ("The Cold Light of Day") to get to know Cavill before he suits up to become the "Man of Steel."

Lily Collins

You probably don't remember Collins from "The Blind

Side," "Priest" or "Abduction." Her big breakthrough could come as Snow White in "Mirror Mirror" with Julia Roberts as the evil queen.

Alice Eve

Perhaps you know the English beauty from stinkers like "Crossing Over" or "She's Out of My League." Chances are more will be asking "Who is that?!" when Eve stars in "Decoding Annie Parker," "The Raven" and, most prominently, the younger version of Agent Oh (Emma Thompson) in the third "Men in Black" movie.

Tom Hardy

Hardy has gradually gained more attention thanks to "Warrior" and "Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy." But 2012 looks like his true breakout year, thanks to a starring role in "This Means War," "Wettest County" and, you know, playing the villain in a little movie called "The Dark Knight Rises."

ONE OF THE BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR

Los Angeles Times NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW AFI Entertainment FOX TV

"FINCHER IS NOT JUST A GREAT DIRECTOR—HE'S AN ARTIST WITH THE EYES OF A VOYEUR, AND HE HAS MADE AN ELECTRIFYING MOVIE BY TURNING THE AUDIENCE INTO ADDICTS OF THE FORBIDDEN. 'THE GIRL WITH THE DRAGON TATTOO' IS A BRILLIANT FRANCHISE MOVIE. GRADE A!"

Entertainment x OWEN GLEIBERMAN

"SPONTANEOUS AND SENSATIONAL. CRAIG AND MARA LEAVE YOU WISHING THE DIRECTOR WOULD HURRY UP AND SHOOT THE NEXT MOVIE. A FABULOUSLY SINISTER ENTERTAINMENT!"

The Miami Herald x RENE RODRIGUEZ

"LISBETH IS A MARVELOUS POP-CULTURE CHARACTER, STRANGER AND MORE COMPLEX THAN THE AVERAGE SUPERHERO AND MORE INTRIGUING THAN THE USUAL BOY WIZARDS AND VAMPIRE BRIDES. SHE IS AN OUTLAW FEMINIST FANTASY-HEROINE!"

The New York Times x A.O. SCOTT

Gina Carano

The MMA fighter and former American Gladiator appears in only one movie in 2012, "Haywire" (out Jan. 20). But when you're the main character in a movie directed by Steven Soderbergh that also features Michael Fassbender, Ewan McGregor, Antonio Banderas, Channing Tatum and Michael Douglas, you've become a star.

Joel Edgerton

The Australian actor has paid his dues in everything from "Kinky Boots" to "Warrior" to "The Thing." When he appears as Tom Buchanan in "The Great Gatsby" and stars with Jennifer Garner in "The Odd Life of Timothy Green," Edgerton's career should finally receive the punch it deserves.

David Oyelowo

With significant upcoming roles in the action flick "Red Tails" and "The Paperboy," Oyelowo may capitalize on his memorable work as Muddy Waters in "Who Do You Love" as well as a significant part in "Rise of the Planet of the Apes."

Nicholas Hoult

The child star from "About A Boy" certainly didn't look so awkward in "A Single Man" or "X-Men First Class," and he becomes a leading man in 2012 with Bryan Singer's "Jack the Giant Killer" and "Warm Bodies."

Gemma Arterton

Soon starring with Jeremy Renner in "Hansel and Gretel: Witch Hunters,"

Arterton also headlines the latest from director Neil Jordan. That should give her more lasting exposure than "Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time."

Josh Hutcherson

It seems like "The Kids Are All Right" actor's been around forever. Thanks to major parts in "The Hunger Games" and the "Red Dawn" remake this year, people may see the 19-year-old as all grown up.

9 industry insiders predict what's next in dining and nightlife

By Erin Sarris | FOR REDEYE

With 2011 behind us, it's time to look into the crystal ball and see what's on the horizon for 2012. Of course, no one knows for sure what to expect in the next year, but we talked to movers and shakers in Chicago's dining and nightlife circles to ask for their best guesses. As you'll see, they weren't short of opinions.

QUIRKY MUSIC NIGHTS

Allison Burque DJ at Danny's, Hideout and Subterranean

In 2012, music at bars will move beyond a broad genre (house, trance, retro) and focus on more specialized, creative events. Think themes like an evening dedicated to '90s female-fronted bands such as Hole or bump 'n' grind parties featuring R. Kelly jams. "In the cold winter months, you need to do something really fun and different to get people out of their houses," Burque said.

THE RETURN TO DECADENCE

executive chef at coming-soon Nellcote and partner at RM, an upcoming champagne salon

Van Camp predicts that the scene will move away from understated "rustic casual" interiors with butcher-block tables and vintage-y hanging light bulbs. In its place will be a return to eye-grabbing, extravagant decor and drinks at a reasonable price point. "Our generation wants luxury, but they don't want to overpay for it," he said.

FINE DINING

Tony Hu

owner of Lao Sze Chuan, Lao Hunan and more

Chinatown restaurateur Hu is banking on the hope that as the economy gets better, we'll see a return to fine dining. Want proof? He's branching out from Chinatown to open a more upscale spot in River North in October. "When I eat casual, I'll eat at home. Dining out is going to be for meals that are different and creative," he says.

WATER WITH ICE

Chuy Valencia chef/partner at Chilam Balam and "Top Chef: Texas" cast member
Valencia is tired of that ice-less, room temperature water that you have to pour yourself at the table from a rustic-looking bottle. "I don't know when ice went out of style," he said, adding that he hopes to see H2O (preferably poured by staffers, not diners) with ice cubes making a comeback in 2012.

BOUTIQUE SPIN-OFF SPOTS

Stephen Cole

partner at The Barrelhouse Flat

For 2012, Cole predicts we'll see more smaller, boutique-style shops and restaurants stemming from already flourishing restaurants, along the lines of Gilt Bar's Doughnut Vault and Paul Kahan's Publican Quality Meats. "They can do this because they have extremely talented and passionate people working for them," he said.

ELECTRONIC DANCE EXPLOSION

Joey Giammarino
manager at The Mid

Skrillex at the Bears game. Calvin Harris at Nordstrom. Swedish House Mafia at the Bulls game. When you hear electronic dance music in mainstream places such as department stores and major sporting events, "you know the genre will peak in a big way in 2012," Giammarino said.

COCKTAILS AT HOME

Revae Schneider owner of Femme Du Coupe cocktail- and bar-styling company

If you're craving a high-quality cocktail in 2012, look no further than your own liquor cabinet. Schneider predicts that more of us will take cocktail classes on how to make tasty libations at home. "You don't necessarily need to go to bartending school to know how to make a good drink," she said.

BAKERY CASES IN RESTAURANTS

Amanda Rockman pastry chef at The Bristol and coming-soon Balena

During her visits to the West Coast for "Top Chef Just Desserts," Rockman noticed a trend she predicts will make its way eastward in 2012: bakery cases at restaurants. "It's just another medium for pastry chefs to use," she said, noting that diners can grab cookies, tarts and parfaits on their way out after a meal.

INNOVATIVE INGREDIENTS IN BEER

Isaac Showaki co-owner of 5 Rabbit Brewery, a Chicago-based microbrewery

In 2012, churning out yet another IPA won't cut it for microbrewers. Showaki predicts that beer lovers will demand newer, more innovative ingredients in their brews. "Beer will also go back to its roots, with more drinkable and less extreme [options]," he said.

THE CLASH

DEBATING WHATEVER TIMELY MUSICAL QUESTION THAT STRIKES A CHORD WITH US

It's the new year, and you want new music.

This question: Is it still worth listening to music on the radio?

YES

Emily Van Zandt

EVANZANDT@TRIBUNE.COM

@MMXBARS

VS

NO

Brian Moore

BRMOORE@TRIBUNE.COM

@REDEYESPORTSGUY

So maybe you don't cruise around listening to Ryan Seacrest. That doesn't mean radio is irrelevant. Radio in all its 2012 forms (including Pandora and Sirius) is still introducing people to new artists. Without the college station that fed into my hometown, I never would have heard Smashing Pumpkins, and in a few years it'll do the same for some kid hearing the White Stripes. You can't just rely on your own taste at the time—it's boring. Let someone else do the picking and you might learn something.

If you want classic rock (97.9), classic-rock (97.1), adult alternative with a dash of classic (93.1), classic pop hits (104.3) or the same five Katy Perry, Rihanna, LMFAO, Adele and Bruno Mars songs, then by all means tune in to terrestrial radio. Otherwise, listen to what you want when you want on Spotify, Pandora or last.fm. Unless, of course, you're 65 years old.

LAST WEEK'S WINNER: WHEN OTHER CONCERT-GOERS SING ALONG WITH THE BAND, IS THAT FUN OR ANNOYING?

1 Don't be too subtle

In the (way) post-Sex and the City climate of 2012, there seems to be a pervasive fear among women of looking desperate. And with good reason: desperation is definitely not sexy. But so intense is this fear of coming on too strong that more and more women are forgetting to come on at all. Some of us are playing it way too cool when it comes to dating.

Next time you like someone, make sure they know you like them! Smile, flirt, engage in physical contact, and if you're feeling brave, initiate the kiss yourself.

And most important, stop waiting around to be asked out and do some of the asking yourself!

2 Break up with the ex for good

That ex. The one who, if you're being really honest, still manages to have an inexplicable hold on you. The one who'll text you out of the blue and throw your whole life in disarray. The one you've been trying (unsuccessfully) to be "just friends" with for years. The one who you inevitably end up talking about to anyone who will listen, even though it's been a long time now. You aren't dating. You shouldn't waste so much mental energy on that person, and you know it. Break up for good, and move on with your life.

3 Be nice to the guy (or girl!) you know is in love with you

Almost every woman on the planet has one: the poor chap who's always around, always hoping one day you'll realize you've been in love with him all along. When friends point out that he's totally in love with you, you brush it off and insist you're just friends. You tell yourself you're being nice to him. You don't consciously lead him on.

If you think there's any chance that you're stringing him along, or that he's waiting for you, you've got to let him go. Better for him to be the perfect boyfriend for someone else than the occasional ego boost for you.

Dating resolutions all women should make

4 Say yes to more dates

OK, maybe you're not totally feeling it because, well, sure he's nice but his bald spot is ... really bald and, I dunno, you're just not instantly sexually attracted to him.

Say yes anyway. Say yes to one date! What, you're soooo amazing that some guys don't even get a chance with you? You can have coffee with anyone for half an hour—it won't kill you.

5 Listen to your friends

Girls who have managed to date a guy for more than five consecutive dates sometimes tend to become mighty protective and defensive of their burgeoning relationship. They'll tentatively ask their friends what they thought of their new beau, but the answer had sure as hell better be "He's great!"

But when a friend seems concerned about an aspect of your relationship, don't immediately bristle and change the subject. He or she has seen you through relationships before and has a good idea of what works for you and what doesn't, what's alarming and what isn't.

Your friends want to see you happy. If they think a significant other is sort of a jerk to you or think something is weird, don't immediately dismiss their opinion.

CATWALK REDUX

Can these 'Project Runway: All Stars' make it work without Tim Gunn?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

We were so excited about Thursday's premiere of "Jersey Shore: Return to Skanklandia" that we almost forgot that it's time for "Project Runway: All Stars"! The good: More time with Austin Scarlett and Mondo. The bad: Heidi Klum, Michael Kors and Nina Garcia are replaced with new judges, and Tim Gunn is replaced as mentor by some chick we've never heard of. SPOILER ALERT: Have your DVR at the ready—Elisa Jimenez was kicked off in the first round, and there's much more chopping to come.

DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

1. Austin Scarlett

How he finished: Fourth place in Season 1
Remember him for: Being generally fabulous and having his spot in the finale stolen by Wendy Pepper, one of the worst reality TV villains of all time.

2. Kara Janx

How she finished: Fourth place in Season 2
Remember her for: Having a great South African accent and an even better talent for designing wrap dresses.

3. Elisa Jimenez

How she finished: 10th place in Season 4
Remember her for: Being super-nutty. And by super-nutty, we mean she used herself to measure clothes instead of the mannequin and may have been from another planet.

4. Sweet P

How she finished: Fifth place in Season 4

Remember her for: Having a super-cutesy aesthetic that did not at all reflect her biker-ish, tattooed exterior. Also, her Levi's challenge dress was a-dorable.

5. Rami Kashou

How he finished: Second place in Season 4
Remember him for: Draping! For the love of God, so much draping! Seriously though, Rami's work is beautiful.

6. Jerell Scott

How he finished: Fourth place in Season 5
Remember him for: Shockingly not making it to Bryant Park. Jerell's designs were awesome all season—and he had a much better attitude than certain finalists ...

7. Kenley Collins

How she finished: Third place in Season 5
Remember her for: Being a raging fire-lizard of death. If you can't get along with Tim Gunn, there's something seriously wrong with you.

8. Gordana Gehlhausen

How she finished: Fourth place in Season 6
Remember her for: She's the oldest designer on this season, and was criticized at one point in her season for lack of creativity, but the Yugoslavian kept a good attitude.

9. Anthony Williams

How he finished: Fifth place in Season 7
Remember him for: Being brought back on the show after being kicked off, winning that challenge—and then getting kicked off the following week. Ouch.

10. Mila Hermanovski

How she finished: Third place in Season 7
Remember her for: Squeezing into the finale after the judges made her compete against fourth-place Jay Nicolas Sario for the last slot at Bryant Park.

11. April Johnston

How she finished: Fifth place in Season 8
Remember her for: Well, according to her Lifetime profile, she loves taxidermy and Double Stuf Oreos, which we really don't want to see combined.

12. Michael Costello

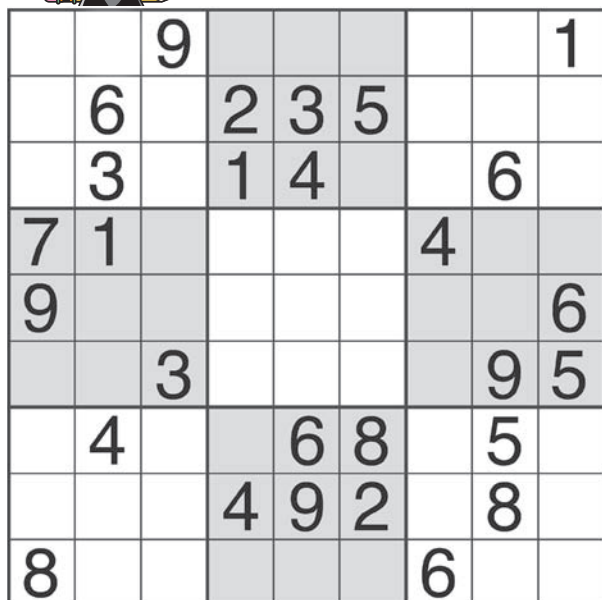

How he finished: Fourth place in Season 8
Remember him for: Being called a cheater and a crier—a lot—which really is a wonderful "Project Runway" combination. To be fair, there were many tears.

13. Mondo Guerra

How he finished: Second place in Season 8
Remember him for: Being completely ROBBED of the crown by the judges in the final runway show. If Mondo doesn't win, Lifetime probably will see a riot outside its offices.

TODAY IN THE YEAR...

1994: Figure skater Nancy Kerrigan was clubbed on the right leg by an assailant in Detroit.
2001: With the vanquished Vice President Al Gore presiding, Congress formally certified George W. Bush the winner of the close and bitterly contested 2000 presidential election.
2006: Chicago's Pilgrim Baptist Church, the historic Bronzeville edifice designed by Louis Sullivan and considered the birthplace of gospel music, was nearly destroyed by fire.

Jackie from "That '70s Show" would SO approve of this. Mila Kunis is the latest celeb to become a face of French fashion label Dior, Reuters reports. Kunis will model for the Miss Dior handbag collection in the brand's spring/summer ad campaign, causing men everywhere to wonder: Where were you on this one, Victoria's Secret?

Super Tebow!

Tim Tebow's Broncos team may have finished the season 8-8, but for Marvel Comics, that's enough to warrant the superhero treatment. ESPN and the comic book giant partnered and released three renderings in a series called "Tebow Time" on Thursday, meant to immortalize in ink the QB's penchant for overcoming "insurmountable odds," according to the two companies.

Make a hot fuss

Here's some killer news: The Killers have recorded several songs for a new album to be released later this year, frontman Brandon Flowers (left) said on BBC Radio 1, according to billboard.com. "It's just whether it's [released in] the summertime or the wintertime," Flowers said. Rock on.
